THE OLD FARM-HOUSE.

In a little grove of shade trees,
Stands a farm-house, brown and old,
With a wealth of vines around it,
Gemmed with flowers of rod and gold;
By the path that makes a circle
Of white sand around the lawn,
Grow sweet Timothy and clover,
Rosy as a June-day dawn.

Around its door pale morning glories,
Jump-up-johnnies, dabitas, pinks,
Cluster—concentrated beauties,
Married by a thousand links;
Links of love, the works of nature's
Mystery of handleraft;
Links of flory, through which fairy
Argosies of perfume waft.

And the gate that swings before it.

And the ferce as white as anow,
Stand or variegated corbions.

Which the san free all salow,
Crowning them with many colors—
Yellow, purple, green and blue—
As if rainbows there and fallen,
Melted into rarest dew.

On its roof the greenest messes,
Catch the shadows from the trees;
On its sides red honeysuckles
Make their courtesies to the breeze;
And the over-nervous willows.
Standing near the garden's bounds,
Throw a web of shade faulastic
On the clover-mantled ground.

O'er the well an arch of grape-vines.
Formed with heaven's directed care,
Chains the shades to the water,
Making cool the summor air;
And a tiny church, he steepte
Piercing through a bower of leaves,
is a sure and sarred refuge
Where the wrea her carel weaves,

IN THE MEADOWS.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR. I lie in the Summer Mendows, in the mendows all alone, With the infirite sky above me And the sun on his mid-day throne

And a million of happy insects Sing in the warm repose.

From the billowy green beneath me

To the fathomiess blue above, The creatures of flod are happy in the warmth of their summer fore.

The awful truth prises.
That Beath is in the World. And thosky may beam as ever, And never a cloud be curled And the air be living edors, But Death is in the World?

From the World we Line In. A GUEST AT MIDNIGHT.

BY JNO. P. LACROIX.

On the third of November, 1843, my father, mother and two sisters paid their annual visit to the mansion of my maternal grandfather who resided about ten miles from the river, in that romantic hillmained at home, and as I always had a childish dread of solitude and darkness, I expected to pass a very dreary day and night, especially if the lattershould prove never desire to hear again. night, especially if the lattershould prove dark and stormy, which the heavy masses of clouds, lying like distant mountains on the western horizon now seemed to threat.

"OVER THE RIVER."

Over the riverthey becken so me—
Loved ones who've crossed to the further cide;
The gleam of their anewy robes I see,
But their voices are drewed in the rushing tide.
There's one with ringlets of sunsy gold.
And eyes, the reflection of heaven wown blue,
He crossed in twilight gray and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from morfal view.
We saw not the angels who met him there;
That gate of the city we could not see;
Over the river, over the river. er the river, over the river. My brother stands waiting to welcome me.

Over the river the bestman pale. Over the river the boatman pale.
Carried another—the homsehold pet;
Her brown curis waved in the reatle galo—
Darling Minniel I see her yes.
She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands;
And fearlessly estered the phantom bars;
We watched it glide from the silver anote.
And all our sanships grew strangely dark.
We know she is ande on the further side,
Whore sait the ranseauced and anguls be;
Over the river, the myetic river,
As shiddhood's idea is watting for me.

For none return from those quiet shores, who cross with the boxtmen cold and pale; We hear the dip of the golden cars.
And catch a glimpse of the snowy sell.—
And lo' liney have pass'd from our yearning heart. They cross the stream, and are gone for aye; We may not sendor the vell upart.
That hides from our vision the gates of day. We only know, that their barks no more May sail with as o'er life's stormy sea; But somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore, They watch, and becken, and walt for me.

And I sh and taink, when the sunset's gold is finabling river, and hill, and shore. I shall one day stand by the water cold, And list for the sound of the bostman's car, i shall watch for a given of the flapping sali; I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand; I shall pass from sight with the bostman pair, To the better hore of the spirit land; I shall know the loved who have gone before. And joffully sweet, will the meeting be. When over the river, the peaceful river, The Angel of Double shall carry see.
